This tense thriller takes an unsuspecting young couple inside the world of black market organ transplants.

With two months to live, Allie Graves faces a four-year wait for the kidney transplant that will save her life. In desperation, they turn to James Dolan who charges recipients exorbitant fees, while harvesting organs from needy donors like Maria - a terrified Mexican teenager, who'll give up a kidney to help her family get across the border. Allie catches a glimpse of Maria in the makeshift operating room they share inside a downtown hotel. And while Allie's transplant is successful, she can't stop thinking about the young woman who saved her life. But when the desperate young donor dies during the botched surgery, Allie's heroic fight for justice is the only way she can repay her, even if that means jeopardizing her own family's future.
