

TULIPS IN SPRING

FIONA GUBELMANN, LUCAS BRYANT
& KEVIN MCNULTY

Rose Newell is a young interior designer employed at Caroline Design, an upscale Los Angeles agency. When her tyrannical boss, Caroline Sebastian, asks her to design a high-end client's home, Rose springs into action, encouraged by her current boyfriend and colleague, Rob Laswell. As she begins the project, Rose learns that her father, Frank, has suffered a broken leg and that her help is badly needed at Newell Farms, her parents' tulip farm in rural Washington. When Caroline permits her to work remotely, Rose returns to her hometown, and to her damaged relationship with Frank, who resents her having chosen a cosmopolitan career over the family business.

At Newell Farms, Rose meets Tom Novak – a handsome “flower broker” who acts as a liaison between the farm and local distributors – and discovers that the farm is faltering financially and that her parents are considering selling it to a ruthless competitor.

With time running out, Rose must rediscover her green thumb to save her family's farm, and decide whether she'll find true happiness – and true love – by staying in Los Angeles or returning to her folksy hometown.
